Most Americans agree that our tax system is complex, confusing, and inefficient.

The Federal government collects revenues from a variety of sources.

All income groups pay taxes but the rates and types they pay are different. (See how the Federal income tax type of上市公司_careers_cvs.com)

The federal tax system is progressive, with higher-income taxpayers facing higher tax rates.

The U.S. tax burden is lower than most other industrial countries.

There are numerous federal tax breaks and credits. It's worth noting what the government spends on welfare, housing, health, and unemployment.

Tax expenditures tend to benefit high-income taxpayers.

Many economists believe that simplifying the tax code would help the economy and reduce the deficit.

Tax reform done right would...